7.5 Documented Information

ISO 27001:2013 requires organisations to maintain documented information as part of their ISMS.

- Such information is necessary internally to support the ISMS in place
- You can adjust the extent of your documented information based on your organisation size, complexity of processes, varying products and services, besides many other reasons

As the standard now takes on a more process-focused management system rather than a document-based management system, formal written documents do not need to be created for all procedures.
